David, Clinical Director, to speak before psychiatrists and students regarding the Robert Shulman serial killer trial, which Banfelder attended every day for a period of fifteen months in Riverhead, N.Y. He lectured re the trial, fiction and nonfiction writing as it pertained to his psychological thrillers as well as the author's expository writings concerning our criminal justice system. He was given an extensive tour of the facility; i.e., both male and female quarters, crash rooms, et cetera, for the express purpose of building verisimilitude into his novel (presently in manuscript form), Trace Evidence. Note: The Robert Shulman serial killer trial was the first death penalty case on Long Island in a quarter of a century.
